In 1929, New York's Mayor was James J. Walker, the handsome, high-living former lyric writer ("Will You Love Me in December as You Do in May?"). "Beau James" seldom missed a Broadway opening and during much of the decade, though married, openly courted an attractive chorus girl, Betty Compton. Under Mayor Walker's protective guidance, Miss Compton rose from the ranks of the chorus to play featured roles. Always willing to apply Walker's influence to make her wishes come true, she created many difficulties for Fifty Million Frenchmen.

When the show reached New York, she was so dissatisfied with her dressing room at the Lyric

Theater that she complained to the Mayor, who slapped building-code violations on the theater and lifted them only when Miss Compton was given the star's dressing room, even though several other performers had superior claims to the room.

Similarly, Miss Compton wanted to snare the best songs in the score. She made a determined effort to wrest "You Do Something to Me" from the show's leading man, William Gaxton. When she failed, she made life difficult for Porter, who was compelled to write song after song for her in a valiant effort to satisfy her. "Why Don't We Try Staying Home?" is perhaps the best of the many songs Miss Compton refused to sing.

IF YOU CAN DREAM, THE WORLD'S A BETTER PLACE BY FAR. THE LOVE YOU SEEK IS BY YOUR SIDE.

IF YOU CAN DREAM, YOU'RE ANY ONE YOU DREAM YOU ARE. EACH KISS WILL LEAVE YOU STARRY-EYED.

DAY OR NIGHT, YOU'VE THE RIGHT TO PRE-TEND.

CLOSE YOUR EYES. EACH SURPRISE IS YOURS, MY FRIEND.
